

Monday Morning
Oct 31.

Dear Anne

Deborah went away in a hurry and left her letter unfinished she wrote till three o'clock last night, I hardly know what to tell you, she says she has given you a full account of the meeting, one thing I can tell, Wendell heard Stanton whisper to Alden pointing to Leavin "It worth a hundred dollars to us, to have him here. It was beautiful to see the cold chill whenever they rose or their names were mentioned.

Edmund has been here this morning, Ingersoll and Philbrick has called to see Edmund about a meeting of the Lib Com, which they decided to hold here next Friday the Slaves trial comes on on Saturday I suppose we shall all go. None of the papers have said anything about the meeting, except a few of the Penny paper and the Courier. Backus has said every thing handsome about the meeting, what a shame it was that the city authorities were not here to protect the citizens, from these few

Assistants, Andrew Robeson has just been here with his own $10 & $20 that he collected to print the Lenox address J H Mills gave $10. Mrs Fuller has called and Wendell has been here with a notice he is trying to get into the Courier, it written request & direction from James B Gray to the printer to keep the slave "on my authority till I call for him", and a ^{written} pledge on the part of Austin to pay the printer. Wendell has prepared some remarks upon it and Buckeyman may put it in. I will try to get it and send you this is not two I must go to Messrs

Emy's corner

we are in such a whirl the whole time that you must not wonder that we do ^{write} so, either, it is almost impossible
